

RESERVE DISTRICTS
WILL BE ANNOUNCED

ALL INFORMATION TO EFFECT
FINAL DECISION MUST BE RE-CEIVED BY MONDAY.

TO REQUIRE A MONTH

Reserve Bank Organization Committee Will Begin Tuesday Its Task of Making Selections.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, March 7.—Under a decision of the reserve bank organization committee all information designed to affect the definition of federal reserve districts or the location of reserve bank cities must be received at the treasury department March 9.

Need Additional Data.
Although the committee has spent much time discussing the location of reserve cities since its trip through the country ended here Feb. 18, it was decided that additional data should be considered if filed before next Monday.

Owing to the illness of Secretary Huston the committee has met only a few times recently. Beginning Tuesday, however, the task of making the selection will be taken up in earnest and it is understood will be completed in time to allow President Wilson to name the members of the federal reserve board before April 1.

The law provides that not more than one member of the board shall come from one district and they must be defined before the nominations are made.

Reach No Conclusion.
Secretary McAdoo today made public the following statement:
"The statement published this morning that the reserve banks organization committee had determined upon eleven banks and had designated certain cities as the headquarters for such banks is mere fabrication. The committee has reached no conclusion whatever on this subject and in order that the country may be prepared for a recrudescence of such statements, we desire to say that any statement purporting to give the views of members of the committee in advance of their formal announcement are wholly unauthorized and absolutely speculative."

TWO MEN WITH SAME NAME RUNNING FOR OFFICE IN ST. PAUL CITY ELECTION.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
St. Paul, March 7.—What's in a name? There are two men in St. Paul who have been attempting for the past two months to figure out just what their is in their names. They both bear exactly the same names down to the very last letter and to the pronunciation. Their name is August Hohenstein. One is a grocer and the other is agent for a life insurance company. Both are old residents of St. Paul and both are today in the running for the city council. Neither is willing to withdraw in favor of his namesake.

Under the state law, the names that appear on ballots cannot have any designating mark. For instance, August Hohenstein the grocer could not have "No. 1." placed after his name to set him apart from the life insurance agent of the same name. Compromises, law suits, settlements and grand jury indictments are threatened by both Hohensteins to force each other to withdraw, but neither will give in and the prospects are that both names will go on the ballot. The attorneys who are trying to adjust the matter are on the verge of hysteria. They can't even know how they'll tell which one is elected.

Legendre is suspected of having set the fire which cost the lives of four persons Thursday night, and also of having set fire in Saxon for the last two years.

Two of the men cremated in the fire which destroyed the boarding house and saloon of Patrick Auger, are not yet identified. One of the men has been identified as Newman A. Cook of Escanaba, Mich. Anna Bauer, who was seriously burned, is still alive.

The funerals of the other victims are being held in Saxon today.

State Fire Marshall Clem F. Host, will personally supervise the investigation of the fire. An inquest will be held next Wednesday.

Fit of Penitence Following Desperate Affair.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Kansas City, Mo., March 7.—Two penitent boys, according to the police, told the story which explains the disappearance of more than $2,000 worth of jewelry and clothing from South Side home within the last month.

Leo Bagle, 15 years old, and Arthur Rhodes, 16, were conferring in an alley in the middle of the night when arrested. They carried revolvers, blackjacks, pockets full of cigars and matches.

The boys led the police to a cache in a deserted shed back of a downtown theatre. A box was dug up in the bottom of the shed. It was full of watches, bracelets and local jewelry. The boys said they had sold much other loot, including clothing, musical instruments, umbrellas and shotguns. Today dozens of fashionable women visited the police station to identify various articles of jewelry.

OTHER STATES COPY
EMPLOYMENT SYSTEM

Wisconsin's Method of Conducting
Free Employment Offices Meets
General Approval.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., March 7.—The Wisconsin method of conducting free employment offices to relieve the unemployed in attracting attention to many states, and from Canada and numerous states in the Union have come requests for aid in organizing similar agencies. The bureau of public welfare at Regina, Sask., is one of these. Toronto, Can., will adopt the card system used by the Wisconsin offices. Ohio is copying the system, according to a letter received by William M. Leiserson from Fred C. Croxton, chief statistician of the industrial commission. The International Exposition commission, Lyons, France, to be held next November, will have a section devoted to unemployment and employment offices, and Wisconsin will send exhibits. Kentucky wants to follow the Milwaukee plan.

The superintendent of the Wisconsin free employment offices, W. M. Leiserson, is working on a bill for a national government, the object being to distribute labor throughout the country and to regular and license private employment agencies. The plan contemplates a labor market bulletin to cover the entire country in the same way as Dun's review covers the country's trade for the business world. Because the national government has done nothing to solve this problem, the state employment offices, of which nineteen have been organized, have formed a union under the name of the American Association of Public Employment Offices. This was started by Mr. Leiserson, and completed at Chicago last December. The next convention will be held at Indianapolis. This association persuaded the federal commission on industrial relations to give heed to the demand for a solution of this problem.

Last year Wisconsin filed 26,700 positions through its four state offices, located at Milwaukee, Oshkosh, Superior and La Crosse, at a cost of $3,540 to the state and of $3,440 to cities and counties, making a total expense of $11,786. This was at the rate of 44 cents per job, of which 31 cents was the state's share and 13 cents was the city or county's share. It is said employers could have paid from $1 to $5 per job.

AMERICAN COLLEGES
NEED IMPROVEMENTS

President of New York University
Outlines Four Changes for Higher Institutions.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New Haven, Conn., March 7.—Four recommendations for radical changes in American institutions of higher education were made today by Professor J. Stephenson of New York University. They were as follows:

"1. The work of colleges and universities should be differentiated sharply, colleges without proper resources and equipment should be converted into academies or secondary schools.

"2. A higher standing should be set for teachers.

"3. The salary of a full professor at 25 should compare favorably with that of a lawyer or physician or equal ability at the same age; salaries at present paid to college teachers are actually small and advance through the several grades to full professor is slow.

"4. The college faculty should have its own representative on the board of trustees."

INSULTS OVER WIRE
END IN GUN FIGHT

Milwaukee Road Operators Engage in Pistol Duel as Result of Quarrel.—One Man in Hospital.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Milwaukee, March 7.—A quarrel between two Milwaukee road telegraph operators that was brought to a climax after being carried on over the wires between two stations left Thomas Kerr, operator at Schleisengerville, in a serious condition at St. Joseph's hospital after being struck by two bullets from the gun of La Point, an operator at Rugby Junction.

After the shooting, which occurred at La Point's station, he surrendered himself to the sheriff. One of the bullets punctured Kerr's left chest. The other passed through the abdominal wall and may have injured some of the intestines.

The shooting occurred at Rugby Junction shortly after midnight. It is thought to have been brought about after some insulting exchanges had been made over the wire. Kerr is known to have left his post and gone to the junction to meet La Point face to face.

When Kerr reached the junction he entered the station and upbraided La Point. They had hot words. Several insulting remarks on both sides were said to have been passed. At this the Rugby operator flew into a rage and drawing the gun which, as an operator he is privileged to carry, he fired two shots at his tormentor.

The first entered Kerr's left cheek and became lodged in his mouth. La Point pulled the trigger again and this time Kerr was hit in the abdomen. He fell to the floor of the station and blood was soon pouring from his wounds. After seeing what he had done La Point was filled with remorse. A train crew was summoned and Kerr's bleeding body was rushed to the Northwest Avenue hospital.

The news had been flashed ahead and an ambulance was waiting to take the wounded man to the hospital, where he was put on an operating table and a search begun for the bullets. His condition was reported as precarious this morning. La Point is being held pending the outcome of the investigation. Kerr is 32 years old and lives in Schleisengerville.

DEPEND ON REPORTS OF CENSUS BUREAU

IS MOST RELIABLE SOURCE OF STATISTICS IN UNITED STATES.

COMMENT ON AFFAIRS

Milwaukee Correspondent Gives Interesting Gossip in Weekly News Budget.

By Ellis B. Usher.
Milwaukee, March 7. In a recent circular from the census bureau of the United States, Director William J. Harris outlines the work of the bureau since its permanent establishment in 1902 and says that what anyone familiar with its publications will readily endorse, that it is "the best question the greatest statistical office in the world." He gives assurances of his desire to make it still more serviceable to the American people by greater promptitude of publication, though when one realizes the time and labor involved in the compilation of these letters, the accomplishment of these letters have often stated, there are few American statistics worthy of credence that come from any other source. For example, when the bureau of the census gathers the statistics of cities or states, it sends men to them, and the various methods of accounting of raising revenue, and of conducting business are reduced to something comparable or approximately so. No other authoritative comparison is to be had, and therefore, though census figures are not the nature of things perfect, no other figures are at all to be relied upon. As an illustration of what I mean, it is absolutely misleading for any one to compare the assessed value of taxation of Illinois with Wisconsin without knowledge of the Illinois system, which assumes to assess at full valuation, taxes on only one-third of that assessed. If any person is interested and wants to be fair and as exact as humanly may be, he goes to the census bureau for his facts. The bureau's publications are in most public libraries and if a person desires special information it is often to be found in some of the special publications, and an inquiry will divulge its existence. It is of general interest to know that this month the census contemplates another publication upon wealth, debt, city taxation, bringing statistics down to date, the last previous publication on this subject is nearly ten years old.

Former Wisconsin Man.
It is "The City of Seattle," who was located, and whose political activities, together with those of the women suffragists of that place, have kept Seattle in a turmoil, is a Wisconsin civil war soldier, Colonel Gill, who was a well known figure in Madison a quarter of a century ago. At first Gill was the candidate for mayor on the "wide open" town cry. Now he beats the man who beat him because he has seen a great light and is going to shut the town up tight, or before it can get "tight." His last majority is, if reports are accurate, overwhelming, 15,000 or more, and the women voted for him and the best residence parts of the city supported him. If reports may be credited, the merits of the case, so far as morals are concerned, are mixed. Mr. Gill's wings may be gauzy, but he was able to rise up and fight. The lesson is one that will be worth following by those who see in the recall and the votes of women the purification of politics and the inauguration of the millennium, and those who are not altogether assured of the efficacy of such means of purification may also find the case worth study. One of our troubles in these days is that so many things are started and so few finished that the average man gets dizzy trying to get at the real conditions.

Stockholders Increase.
The Wall Street Journal recently published a list of seventy-two railroads which in an aggregate capital exceeding six billions of dollars. This is an increase of less than a billion and a half in capital since 1906. But the most interesting fact is that the number of stockholders has risen from 130,078 to 461,445, and of these last 130,078 were women in 1913. Singularly the number of women now corresponds exactly with the number of stockholders. The striking thing shown is that railroads, the greatest employers of labor in the country, are second only to life insurance in being widely distributed in their ownership. And in addition to direct ownership through the investments of life insurance companies, every policy holder in the land is a part owner in railroad securities to some extent.

One of the women who has come down the ages with a halo of maternal glory about her, is Cornelia, the Mother of the Gracchi, whose fame has rested upon the fact that she said of her sons these are my "jewels." This came to mind upon reading some newspaper interviews with a number of maiden or childless women as to the six greatest women of the day. The lists given in each case put Jane Addams at the head, and included these names: Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanor Duse, Tetrazzini, Edith Wharton, Madam Currie, Helen Keller, Maude Adams, Ellen Key, and Mary Schreiner. Emeline Pankhurst and Mary Proctor, after whose name the reporter felt it necessary to put the word "astronomer" in brackets. The board of the Panama exposition at San Francisco have announced that they intend to invite the six greatest women in the world. If the Milwaukee lists are suggestive, motherhood is no longer a badge of greatness. Lord Bacon's idea was that "single or childless men" were the only discredited service for the state. So public opinion, over-reputation, seems likely to follow his rule as to women and it may properly open the way to the question—what is greatness?

Good Financial Standing.

Advertisement.
In line with what these letters have been saying of the progress of the Erie railroad under the administration of President Underwood, comes the news this week that about $12,000,000 of the road's three-year 5 1/2 per cent collateral notes were just offered in New York for April 1 delivery and were so quickly oversubscribed that the subscription books were almost immediately closed. What was even more notable just at this time, a part of the issue was sold abroad. This was an issue made to meet some money maturing next month that had to be cared for in advance of the general bond issue that it is hoped to complete some time before midsummer. The regular reports of the government indicate that there is a change in the trend of immigration to Canada, though it is still large. In 1912 there were 140,143 emigrants from the United States to Canada and in 1913 it dropped 24,392 to 115,751. This too was offset in some degree by immigration from Canada to the United States, which during the last census decade averaged nearly 10,000 a year, and it is reported to be larger now. It is reported from the same official sources that the United States has investments in Canada aggregating $200,000,000 at the end of 1913. Of this sum the larger item, $124,000,000 invested in corporation and municipal bonds, $135,000,000 in branch industrial companies, $103,000,000 in land, and $70,000,000 in timber. These figures suggest that there has been a growing tendency for investment of our money outside the country, for this is an increase in Canada of $358,000,000 in 4 years. Recent estimates also indicate that American investments in Mexico are larger than those of the Mexican people themselves.

YES, PETEY HAS COMPROMISED.

Sport Snap Shots

And now approaches an unpleasant task for the dear manager picking the best bets among all the jockeys and recruits that aspire to a big league berth is never a very great pleasure to the chiefs. It generally amounts to a process of elimination, the impossible and the worst being dispatched speedily to where they came. Of course the ever present possibility that a real star may be chanced upon is what makes managers give careful heed in the inspection of the youngsters who report, but the job is always a hard one and generally trying. A kid may report for a try-out and appear to have a lot of stuff at first. But so often they are unable to stand up under a regular every-day stunt. This is found to be especially true among the amateur stars of the larger towns who tempt the scouts by the dazzling play on Saturdays or Sundays. These youngsters are frequently able to get out once a week and perform like Walter Johnson or Eddie Collins. But when they are weighed on the regular everyday stunt they are found wanting.

Billy Gibson's alibi to the effect that Packey McFarland would give up fighting because his best friend abhors the business, was given an awful jolt by Packey's recently announced intention of making a trip to Australia to fight and taking his bride along. It seems that Packey intends to fight his way around the world on a honeymoon and nothing is said to suggest that the Mrs. McFarland-elect dislikes the fight game. It seems a pity that there can't be a little more team-work between McFarland and Gibson and that they can't agree on a plausible excuse before handing it to the public. Many a time has Billy Gibson thought up a perfectly lovely reason for something that Packey had done or hasn't done and then comes along Packey and spoils it all. The McFarland-Gibson bout, or rather the plans for it, were red-hot of late and thinly veiled excuses and despite all the art of Billy Gibson, few of them gained a very wide credence. And that McFarland-Gibson encounter is now a most laughable myth.

Frank Chance may delight the Yank fans with his appearance on first when the season opens. His family doc, after recently giving him a thorough once over, declared that Frank will in all probability be able to gather with the rest of them and do a little active baseball. Not only would this strengthen the team a lot, but to mention the results at the box office, but it has been seen that the Peerless Leader has done his best managing in uniform. For reference, look to his record with the Cubs.

HIGHS WIN TWICE AT BELOIT TOURNAMENT

COMING CHAMPS TAKE STOUGHTON AND WAUKESHA GAMES EASILY IN BIG RACE.

PREPARE FOR FINALS

Edgerton Was Met This Afternoon With Either Plattville or Beloit in Final Tilt Tonight.

Friday's Scores.
Plattville, 34; Lake Geneva, 3.
Janesville, 21; Stoughton, 8.
Beloit, 39; Woodstock, 15.
Plattville, 19; Evansville, 14.
Edgerton, 20; Elkhorn, 11.

Like veterans of old, the Janesville high school basketball five played with skill and energy yesterday at the Beloit tournament, and completely baffled the Stoughton and Waukesha high aggregations, winning from the former in the afternoon by a 21-8 score, and showing the fast Waukesha quintet under by the one-sided score of 38 to 17 in the evening. Realizing that the Waukesha game would be a hard one, the team took things easy against Stoughton, and merely won by a score which was not so close after all. Stoughton scored but one field goal, while Janesville scored nine, Stickney starring with three.

Stoughton had no light in them, according to previous dope, for on their own floor they held Janesville earlier in the season to a 45 to 22 score, and both teams worked hard.

The lineups and score of the Stoughton-Janesville match follows: Janesville—Atwood, H.; Stewart, R.; Capt. Hemming, C.; Stickney and Barnes, G.; Dalton and Badger, R.

Stoughton—Sullivan, H.; L. Olson, R.; Jerdee, C.; H. Hanson, G.; Elkin, R.

Baskets—Atwood, 2; Stewart, 2; Hemming, 1; Stickney, 3; Sullivan, 2. Free throws—Hemming, 3; Jerdee, 4.

Referee—Phil Gray.
Scorekeeper—Deacon—Janesville. Janesville-Waukesha.

In the last game of the evening Janesville were again winners. Waukesha put up a scrappy game for the first five minutes, the score standing 5 to 5 for 2 short time. Soon Janesville started their usual spurt, and the game was then safely stowed away. Stewart played left guard, Stickney going to Stewart's place at forward. Stickney and Atwood worked like demons, while Stewart held Howard, the fastest man Waukesha had, to one lone goal. Barnes played five minutes.

Hemming is a good guess for all-around center, as are Dalton and Atwood. The mighty center scored seven times, holding his man to four. Stickney and Atwood, at forwards, scored four times each by brilliant work and dodging. Dalton scored once, and held his man to nothing. He was the best floor man on either team, and made but one shot. The lineups and score are as follows:

Janesville—Atwood, H.; Stickney, R.; Capt. Hemming, C.; Stewart, G.; Dalton, R.

Waukesha—Meinick, H.; Howard, R.; Thirwacher, C.; Mann, G.; Marsch, R.

Baskets—Hemming, 7; Atwood, 4; Stickney, 4; Thirwacher, 4; Stewart, 4; Dalton, Howard.

Free throws—Hemming, 3; Stickney, 1; Thirwacher, 5.

Referee—Phil Gray.

BADGERS WIN FROM CHICAGO, 25 TO 18

Coach Meanwell's 1,000 Per Cent Basketball Team Give Maroons Second Beating of Year Last Night.

Coach Meanwell's 1,000 per cent basketball team, three times in three years champions of the "big nine" conference, won from Chicago at Madison last evening in a hot battle, 25 to 18. Only for the lead which the Badgers acquired in the first half of 20 to 11, the Chicago quintet would have trifled them easily, for in the last half the Page tossers took the lead 7 to 5, with the Badgers off form. For Wisconsin Lange and Harper starred, while Stevenson was the stumbling block in the Maroon team. Following is the lineups and score: Wisconsin—Haas, I. F.; Sands, R. F.; Capt. Van Gent, C.; Harper, I. G.; Lange, R. E. Chicago—Goettler, I. F.; Norgren and Stevenson, R. G.; Des Jardins, C.; Molander, I. G.; George and Baumgartner, R. K.

How the Cole finds out what parts you consider standard

Cole

When a new Cole is about to be built, a conference of all Cole distributors is called in Indianapolis, and these men, who at all times are close to the people—to you—agree with our engineers what the car ought to be in order to give complete satisfaction. Every part of the car is discussed, and in this conference the entire sentiment of the motor using public is concentrated. If you have condemned a given motor car unit, your envy, the Cole representative from your territory, will likely vote against the part you have judged "Not standard." If you have praised a certain part, this man will be influenced in its behalf; your opinion will tend to prove to him that among its kind it is your standard. Now the voice of every other motorist gets into this Cole standardization conference in just the same way, so that when a complete set of parts is finally agreed upon, the standardized car, which will be built out of them, will be actually built to fit your personal needs. In an indirect way you have helped build this Cole. That's why a Cole owner will fight for his car—it is the mechanical embodiment of his own judgment. Wouldn't you like to own such a car?

THE STANDARDIZED CAR

will enlist your admiration far beyond your expectations. Just to be sure that the car you are buying is the car which started this stampede of standardization, look for this name—COLE. We are ready to give you a demonstration. Let's make it—TODAY.

WEATHER FORECAST.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

That is an exceedingly superficial view of life that regards its difficulties, obstacles and temptations as superfluities. Constituted as we are, they are as essential to the individual's moral ascent toward higher and larger things as the rungs in a ladder are essential to the climber's attainment of a desired level. If a man's life is a sedentary one, and his employment is such as calls for no physical exertion, then in order to win and maintain bodily stamina he is obliged to extemporize exertion by resort to the gymnasium, the golf fields, or some other contrivance that shall give opportunity for physical tension.

In the same manner life's hardships, trials, temptations are divinely devised for a gracious purpose, and serve us as moral gymnastics. We are subjected to them in order to the invigoration we get by rising superior to them. That is the true philosophy of life, and people who complain of the roughness of life's pathway and who imagine that we might have been put by birth into a paradise that had no thorns and thistles in it can never have thought very carefully and seriously into the way that we are personally constituted and into the fact that nothing ever really becomes our own till we have personally earned it.—The Christian Herald.

The story of Adam and Eve, and the Garden of Eden, where they commenced life, free from care or worry, has long been considered an allegory, and yet the fall of Adam has ever been depicted as a great misfortune to the human family.

It requires a vivid imagination to portray just what the race might have been had the romance been real, and had our first parents been more angelic than human. One of the great lessons which comes from the story is the recognition and respect for the humankind, on the part of the great Creator.

The story makes the will of the man supreme, and it also places him in a world of temptation. This was a part of the environment established by God Himself, and it was just as essential to the development of character, as the good things which the garden was said to contain.

The eyes of the world are centered today on Mexico, the country so disrupted by internal strife, because it lacks an established government. The trouble with Mexico is that the people are incapable of self-government and this is the first and most important requisite in establishing a republic.

Mexico needs a czar with an iron hand, and unless a second Diaz is discovered the corolla warfare now existing will continue indefinitely. While President Wilson is criticized for his policy, it is well to remember that there is no authority for him to recognize in Mexico.

When Adam found himself outside the garden wall he faced the problem of establishing an independent kingdom with all the responsibility which the term implied. He possessed the undisputed right of choice, with no authority to say him nay.

Every soul which has come into being, in normal condition, from that day to this, has met the same problem, in the early stages of the journey, and all over Christendom today the most sacred realm is recognized as the individual citadel where destiny is made or marred at will.

The most serious battles of life are fought within us at close range. The contending forces of good and evil are fought within us at close range. The contending forces of good and evil are not disturbed by an audible voice of warning, and no flaming sword threatens them. The only monitor is the still small voice, prompting to do right, but never compelling.

The reason why the voice is so generally recognized and obeyed, and why the world is growing better every day, is not because the world is more free from temptation, but because strength has developed through resistance.

The hot-house lily and the wayside daisy belong to the same family, but the lily shrivels up before the first cold blast, while the daisy meets it as a part of the program, and greets the sun with smiling face, when the storm has passed.

The strong men and women of this and every other generation, are not of the hot-house variety, for we never get out of life any more than we put into it, and unless the investment includes struggle and resistance there is something lacking in the equipment. Pulling against the tide is the only thing that develops muscle. Anybody can drift.

There is a limited class of people in the world who profess sanctification and perfection. They claim to live above the clouds in an atmosphere so rare that temptations never annoy, and therefore they are sinless and ready for translation. Why the good Lord don't transplant them, while in good condition, has never been discovered.

This is an age of widespread publicity, and every intelligent man who has anything to sell or exploit, exhausts every effort to put his wares before the people, but there are some things which advertise themselves, and their possessors are never required to herald them abroad.

One of these wares is plain, common honesty, known as one of the cardinal virtues, possessed by more people today than at any time in history. The man who has it, never walks the streets with a placard on his back, announcing, "I am honest." Another commodity, about as common, is old-fashioned piety. Not the kind that heralds itself from the house tops, as a "holier than thou" attitude or through a long face and longer prayers, but the simple, everyday brand which goes about doing good, and with smiling face, messages of cheer, and deeds of kindness, lighten the burdens of weary wayfarers.

This class of people are not loud professors, but they are large possessors. They are in sympathy with the tempted because they have shared like experiences. Their moral fibre has been developed through resistance and the finished product is a character strong and vigorous, ready for every emergency.

Some good people are so abnormally good that they deprive their children of innocent amusements, in the home. Cards and social dances are tabooed, as works of the devil, with no argument to satisfy the mind of the child as to the claim.

The fact is overlooked that unless the boy or girl develop into the "George Bassett" or "Sissy" class that they will know all about cards and the dance, before it is time for them to leave home, or if their education along this line is neglected until later, they are liable to go to the other extreme, and land in the reprotable class before they reach middle life.

Every day life, in normal condition, is beset by snares and pitfalls, and the boy who is taught to say "no" to temptation, is stronger than the boy who is never tempted.

If you have ever gone from the prairie, when the wind was blowing a gale, into a forest, where the saplings hid behind the larger trees, you may have noticed what protection did for the weaker member, but when the storm broke in its fury, the slender tree went down before the blast, while the old oak, back in the open, laughed defiance through strength developed by resistance.

The supreme test of life is out in the open, where its battles are fought and victories won. We may be like Mexico, if we will, or we may be masters of the citadel fighting the good fight and winning the highest honors through self-control.

Character is not built in a day; neither does it develop in a hot-house. It is the product of struggle and contact, down to the end of the journey.

TWO BELOIT MEN BROUGHT TO COUNTY JAIL UNTIL TRIAL THIS AFTERNOON

John and Thomas Maher of Freeport, held on the charge of larceny and committing burglary during the daytime, were brought to the Rock county jail last night, as they were unable to furnish the one thousand dollar bail set by Judge Clark in the Beloit municipal court yesterday morning. The two brothers were taken back to Beloit this morning for their hearing.

The Beloit police arrested the men trying to sell a portion of a brass beam, that was stolen from the Millers and Adams scales on Thursday. It is alleged that the suspects broke into the stockyards and stole the brass beam and several other brass parts of the scales. Railroad detectives employed by the St. Paul railroad aided the police in the capture of the men.

LOOKING FIELD OVER TO MAKE SELECTIONS

COL. JOHN HANNAN WILL REPORT TO LA FOLLETTE ON RESULTS.

DEMOCRATS ARE ALIVE

Announcement. Aylward May Run for Senate Causes Widespread Discussion—Karel Men Talk Loudest.

N. B. This is one of a series of articles on Wisconsin politics, written exclusively for the Gazette.
By Bob Acres.
When Col. John Hannan, Senator La Follette's private secretary and faithful "Man Friday" returns to Washington the first of next week, after having investigated the Wisconsin political situation, the next senator will know how to act during the coming campaign. Hannan is an old timer at sizing up political situations. He has visited Madison, talked with the various interested parties, republican side of the political game and is now in Milwaukee, his old stamping ground, doing likewise.

Hannan is a disinterested sort of an individual. He listens a whole lot, asks a few questions, but very seldom talks of the senator's business. His present interest is centered on the apportioning of the tax payers in the various counties in the southern part of the state and the general make-up of the conventions. The recent meeting held in Janesville has caused him considerable worry. He does not understand it. He can not believe that men who have been good La Follette men for years would dare to assert their independence. He was prone to take the view that it was a revival of the old stalwart movement until the facts were brought to his attention, and now he is puzzled.

I saw the colonel in Madison. By the way, his title of colonel is due to the fact he was La Follette's private secretary in Madison and not from any military honors. This was before the Janesville gathering. John was of the opinion it was merely a part of the state's interest in seeking to oust La Follette. I saw him again in Milwaukee, after the convention, and he had changed his mind. He asked me anxiously if Green county had called a convention, what I thought of the proposed gathering in Dane county and would Racine and Kenosha counties follow suit. He said like the other counties that it was taken by the candidates for the assembly up in Roethlis district. Here the aspirants for office are taking Roethlis' platform of economy, his suggestion of the reduction of the state expenses as their own individual platforms.

Nor is the attitude of some other of the northern counties, pleading to the fact that the progressive movement is taking the situation and are urging that La Follette come back to Wisconsin to assert his sway over the voters and lead them into the right way. Hannan is just at this time. By the way, Hannan laughs at what he terms the "pipe dream," that La Follette would resign his senatorship to run for governor. Meanwhile Morris up at Crossville insists that the senator's promise to aid him in his fight against McGovern for the senatorship.

Hutton is certain that he is going to be La Follette's choice for governor. Hull, not so certain, ready to begin his campaign; Roethlis, who does not expect any such aid, already campaigning and wearing out his feet; Crossville, who is waiting for the coming of the new day, is coming out, but not adverse to taking a try at the game himself if he sees half a chance.

SEVEN GIVEN TERMS

IN MUNICIPAL COURT

Police Rob Northwestern Bank Car of Occupants at Early Hour This Morning.

Eight men were brought before Judge Harry L. Maxfield in the municipal court this morning to answer the charges of vagrancy and drunkenness, and all but one pleaded guilty and received various fines and terms of imprisonment for the offense.

This morning at two o'clock Officers Harry Smith and Fred Albright raided the bank car, used by the Northwestern railroad to transport employees to and from the round house at South Janesville, which at night is spotted in the vicinity of the freight house, and captured five Janesville characters who were alleged to have been using the car as a congregating place to escape the police in their drunken orgies.

The five men were jailed and brought before court this morning. When called before the bench to answer complaints four of the men declared that they were not drunk and demanded an examination, stating they had only used the bank car to escape the police on a sleeping quarters.

When William "Dick" Munroe was called he pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and was given a thirty day sentence in default of payment of $10.00.

Judge Maxfield set the bail on three of the prisoners at one hundred dollars and five hundred dollars on John Maxwell, who was just released from serving a six month term several years ago.

One Officer Champion started to take the men over to the county jail, and while waiting for their commitments, three of them, Tom Connors, Jack Connors and Edie Connors, experienced a change of mind and fled into court again wishing to plead guilty.

The three were given thirty day sentences or twenty-five dollar fines, and they preferred the jail sentence.

Maxwell still claimed that he was not guilty and his examination was set for Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Charles Bucknell of Edgerton, who was arrested by Officer Tom Morris at the Chicago & Northwestern station last night, pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness, and on his testimony that he was working and had not been in the habit of drinking, he was fined ten dollars and costs or ten days.

Arrangements were made for the payment of his fine.

Charles Kibinwhite, arrested by Officer Smith on the street, pleaded guilty to the charges of vagrancy and drunkenness, and was given thirty day sentences. Kibinwhite declared that he had only been in Janesville for two days, and admitted being a "floater," his home being in Dakota.

Joe Kennedy of Uniontown, Pennsylvania, arrested at the Northwestern station for drunkenness and begging, and pleaded guilty to both charges.

He was given thirty days in jail, and admitted being a "floater," his home being in Dakota.

Perhaps you have heard the rumblings of distant explosions, the thunder of a giant blast of dynamite that shakes the earth for miles around. These are thrilling enough for most people but not for the camera men who make Lyman H. Howe's reproduction of the Panama canal. At the time of the biggest dynamite operations in "Culebra cut" one of the photographers ventured close enough to the explosions to make a series of remarkable moving pictures of them. "He's crazy about Colonel Goethals' fireworks," declared one of the canal workers. "That's why they call all of the dynamite activity in the 'big ditch' zone. During one of the 'big shots' the picture taking apparatus was near enough to be visibly affected by the shock. When the blast was fired the camera rocked with the earth and a most sensational effect was the result. The films developed so that the spectator easily imagines he feels the actual quiver of the earth. The rapid succession of this and other thrills with the intense interest in the subject itself is making Lyman H. Howe's presentation of the Panama canal, which comes to the Myers theater March 13 and 14, Friday and Saturday, matinee Saturday, quite the film wonder of the age.

Everybody likes to take baths except boys and daws, with both words never take a bath if they didn't have to. Especially boys especially in winter.

When a boy's mother tells him to take a bath and she sees he don't want to, his mother jennily sees, Wats the matter, are you afraid of the water? Which he isn't, and a lookout of if you show a boy a reviv or a oshin and tell him to do what he feels like, wat dux he do. He jumps rite in. But if you show him a bathtub full of water and tell him to do what he feels like, wat dux he do. He wawks rite out of the bathroom.

This proves that while most fellows are not afraid of the water, it don't prove that there isn't afraid of the bathtub. If every fellow had to take a bath in a bathtub, it nite three mother wouldn't haf to call them to make them take three bath, only she wood properly haf to hire a man that wood now to swim to make them stop taking it.

There is 2 reazins why fellows think rivirs and oshins is better than bathtubs, first because theres moar room, and 2nd, because theres less soap. There is no spechil reason why bathtubs is supposed to be taken awn. Sattiday nite, unless may be yure mothir thinks it nite make you weak and you can sleep late as you want to awn Sunday morning and get straying agen. If a fellow was about to have 3 or 4 uthir fellos in to take a bath with him, it mite be moar fun, but this is seldam dun.

Many peepil like to sing while they are taking a bath, watnir they no how to sing or not. This is probabli because the doar is jennily locked and they no noboddy can kum in and make them stop.

The difficulties under which the Panama Canal was dug cannot be understood by the layman who did not have an opportunity to visit the isthmus during the construction period. ROCK CO. FARMERS WILL FLOCK TO CITY FOR BIG MID-WINTER FAIR NEXT WEEK

Secretary Lane and his committees who have had charge of the preparations for the annual mid-winter fair which will be held at the auditorium next week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, are ready for the exhibition. An unusual amount of work has been put forth to interest a larger number of farmers this year and the premium list far exceeds in attractiveness that of former years. Three prizes are offered in each class and in every instance the articles offered are of value and well worth contending for. Farmers' wives will be especially pleased with the prizes which are offered in the culinary department where four places will be awarded for each competition.

In order to be absolutely fair to exhibitors in the grain departments, two classes have been created this year: one for professionals and the other for farmers who do not come under that classification. Thus the ordinary farmer who does not pretend to be an expert seed grain grower will not be placed in competition with men who have achieved a county and state-wide reputation as grain growers. This will encourage a much wider competition in the grain classes and it is probable that farmers from all sections of the county will have entries in the various classes.

The horse show which is to be held in connection with the fair promises to be a big attraction. It will be no less than that there will be two classes: general purpose farm team weighing 1,500 pounds or under; draft team weighing 1,500 pounds or over; and gentleman's single driver. All horses will be shown in harness.

Some facts concerning the show and the complete premium list are given below for the information of possible exhibitors. Farmers will find it to their advantage to scrutinize the list carefully.

The Jansville Mid-Winter Fair will be held at the Jansville Auditorium, South River St., March 12, 13, and 14th.

The Best list of premiums ever offered. Competition will be restricted to farmers and members of farmers' families. Citizens of Jansville are barred from competition.

Get your entries in as early as possible. This will facilitate the handling of exhibits.

All grains and tobacco must be of the 1913 crop and shall not be artificially bleached, clipped, polished or otherwise manipulated.

All goods exhibited will be scored by experts in each department.

Culinary exhibits should be accompanied by ticket stubs if sale is desired.

This year we will have a professional class and farmers class. A. Austin and N. B. Raessler will not compete in the farmers class.

Entries will be free. Mark your entry blank Farmers Class or Professional Class which ever you wish to enter.

By John Henry Newson

"Home of Character" No. 256

In design No. 256 all desirable features of No. 142, both in plan and exterior have been retained. The lines of the original are retained and the same materials used, except in the chimney, where rough faced brick is substituted for the more expensive cobblestone. The rooms, while considerably reduced in size, will meet the requirements of most families. Under average conditions this design should be built, complete, for $5000. To carry out the spirit of the exterior the main rooms should be finished in oak. White enamel would be most suitable for the bedrooms. Either hot air, hot water or vapor heating plants can be used in these houses.

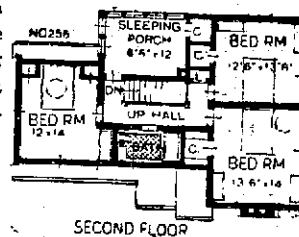

The estimate of cost includes all material and labor required to complete, except decorating and lighting fixtures.

No. 256. Size 42x28 feet. Cost $4000 to $5000.

SUPPLYING ONE'S OWN MOTIVE POWER.

"THE attempt to classify one's acquaintance," says Gelett Burgess, "is the common sport of the thinker, from the fastidious person who says, 'There are two kinds of persons—those who like olives and those who don't,' to the fatuous immemorial lover who says, 'There are two kinds of women—Daisy, and the other kind!'"

Classifications certainly are interesting, aren't they? And since I have Mr. Burgess' word for it that everybody likes to make them, I will not apologize for adding one more to those I have already made.

Today's classification is of the two kinds of people—the many who will run well enough when hitched up to the motive power supplied by society; and the few who supply their own motive power.

For instance, there are many people who will do their best work when they are forced to by competition or by the demands of an employer. There are very few people who have within themselves the motive power to make themselves do their best work whether there is outside compulsion or not.

Again, there are a great many people who, hitched up to the motive power of society, will live up to society's standards of honor and honesty. But there are very few people who think out their own standards of honor and honesty and then have the inward motive power to keep themselves up to them.

In the matters in which society has its eyes on him, the average person can be depended upon to show the proper measure of kindness and courtesy to his fellow beings. What society expects is the motive force which moves and dominates him. On the whole, it would be rather harder for him to resist it than to let himself be moved by it.

But it is distinctly the extraordinary man who supplies his own motive power for kindness and courtesy, who is courteous even when society does not expect it of him, and kind in ways in which his kindness does not show and in a degree which goes beyond society's standards, but is demanded by his own. In the business world there are a great many men who are fitted to work under the direction of others. They are comparatively few who can direct their own energy to profitable use. A large percentage of all the new business concerns which are started are doomed to failure. And one reason is that the men who work successfully in other men's employ were not capable of working for themselves.

As I said before, the class of people who supply their own motive power is comparatively small, but it is not at all exclusive. Anyone may join it who will.

SOMETHING GOOD TO EAT.

A raisin sauce is most delicious with corned tongue, or in fact with beef in any form.

Beef à la Mode, With Raisins.—Cut a quarter of a pound of salt pork into strips and fry in a pan, until crisp, with a sliced onion, using beef drippings for the frying medium. Lay a compact round of beef on them, add a pint of boiling water, cover and cook ten minutes, turning the beef three times during the time. Take up the beef and lay it in a dripping pan, dredge with flour and baste with the gravy. Strain the gravy from the frying pan, thicken with flour, season with salt, teaspoonful of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of chopped raisins, and the same of blanched and shredded almonds, cook five minutes, then pour around the meat.

Cottage Pudding.—Cream a tablespoonful of softened butter with a cup of powdered sugar; add two well beaten eggs, salt a half teaspoonful, and a cup of sweet milk, alternating with 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder; two cups of flour. The amount of flour varies, sometimes more may be needed. The batter must be quite thin, as the pudding is much more delicate in texture if little flour is used. Bake in a flat tin and cut in squares. Serve with a lemon sauce. Mix well a cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour and a half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg; add a cup of boiling water and cook until the starch in the flour is well cooked, then add the juice of a lemon, if very large a half may do; a tablespoonful of butter, a bit of the grated rind may be used instead of the nutmeg, if so desired.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.—Chop potatoes until fine (two cupsful of cold boiled potatoes will serve four people), season with onion juice, salt and pepper, and turn into a well greased frying pan; add a quarter of a cup of milk and cook without stirring for ten minutes. Fold and roll like an omelet on a hot platter when ready to serve. Garnish with a spray of parsley.

Well stewed prunes with whipped cream makes a most delicious dessert, served with cookies.

Women Worth While

(By Selene Armstrong Harmon.)
If women in this country voted and ran of office, Mrs. C. Copley, the young wife of Representative Copley, of Illinois, would have something of a "pull" when it came to being president.

Born in Michigan, spending some of her childhood years in Wisconsin; married in California; calling Illinois home; related to New England by ties of marriage, and old malagony; and living in Washington during the congressional season, Mrs. Copley would be entitled to the voting allegiance of something like the whole United States.

Geographically speaking, she is a citizen of America. Speaking with sentiment, she is from Aurora, Illinois. Not only does she love the town and its people, but her garden is there. And where Mrs. Copley's garden is there is home for her.

Out in Aurora, where she belongs to the woman's club, votes at municipal elections, and takes the keenest interest in the affairs of the community and the state, she gives time and thought to her beloved garden. Having four acres of ground on which to experiment, she can give ample space to both practical and esthetic gardening. Her vegetables are the earliest and the best, a fact to which Mrs. Copley does not even confess when accused, but to which her friends and neighbors in Aurora testify with enthusiasm. With flowers she is equally successful. Mrs. Copley remained in Washington last summer during the extra session of Congress, but the weeks which so many other women found tedious were to her full of interest for she planted a garden and watched it bloom.

Representative Copley is a descendant of the well-known New England family of that name, and New England with its traditions of culture and its historic associations makes a strong appeal to Mrs. Copley. Though she does not ride a hobby, she admits to a very special interest in the rare pieces of old malagony still to be seen in many New England homes today. And Mrs. Copley herself is an expert judge of beautiful wood. She has a keen appreciation also of the sincerity of the workmanship that went into the making of old pieces. At her home in Aurora there are many notably fine specimens of early American craftsmanship, and other pieces that were brought over from England in the early days of American history.

Mrs. Copley is a member of the Congressional Club at the capital. She is interested in social work, and is on the board of management of the Neighborhood House, a settlement in which Mrs. Christian D. Bennett and other Washington society women are interested. Mrs. Copley is an advocate of equal suffrage. She has always voted at municipal elections in Aurora.

"Even if women have a very limited franchise," she says, "I believe it is their duty to use it. I am one of those who believes that the right to vote carries with it the obligation to mer during the extra session of Congress, but the weeks which so many other women found tedious were to her full of interest for she planted a garden and watched it bloom.

EVERYDAY TALKS FOR EVERYDAY PEOPLE

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

"The knowledge that I planned to do it made the act seem actual," said the woman with the baby carriage to her older companion as they walked down the street. "Nonsense, my dear," replied the woman who said, "You said the bill that's all there is to it. Forget it!"

They passed out of hearing. That evening at a friend's house the rest of the story was by chance heard. Here it is: A woman owed a bill and was intending that week to settle it. She called her dealer requesting him to send the bill, though she had kept account herself and knew the correct amount.

The bill came. It was for two dollars less than she knew it should be. Then she entered the valley that most people at some time or other in their lives enter. She was poor. She thought of what she could do with that two dollars and as is often the case the amount seemed miraculously in its ability to purchase—in her mind's eye.

Why should she not pay what was asked? Why bother about the merchant's side of the question? He had a bookkeeper to look after his interests. She would pay the bill he sent! She would!

She returned to her sewing, as she wanted to finish the baby's dress for Sunday. Somehow the little gown must be ready by then. She was poor. She could not sing at her work. That blessed old bill kept sidling up to her in a way that made her believe that conscience can make cowards of us all.

She stopped sewing, walked over and surveyed herself in the glass. "You don't look like a thief," she said to the face reflected there. "At heart that's all you are. A thief! Ouch! What an ugly word!" The next morning she went to town and nearly caused the death by heart failure of her merchant by paying the bill he had sent and two additional dollars. "That's all right to use as a space-filler," you say, "but in real life only a simoleon would do anything like that." Well! here's being glad that we have many, many such simoleons in our world today.

Looking hastily over any paper you pick up, you are daily regaled with stories of how one man after another takes the funds of the poor, uses them with a childlike disregard of the consequences, then casts a long, dark shadow over themselves and their families by being henceforth known by number or taking the suicide route out of it all.

It may be hard to always do what is right (for many of us it may be very hard) but it is the acme of wisdom. To do right for the sake of being square with one's conscience. To be faithful in small things so that you can be trusted in affairs of greater import. Can your conscience make a coward of you?

Pretty Compliment.
The Disraelis were visiting Strathfieldsaye in the time of the old duke of Wellington. Going up to the bedroom, Disraeli found his wife and her maid moving the bed from one side of the room to the other. When he inquired the reason, his wife said: "Well, my dear, the duke sleeps on the other side of the wall, and if I lie against it I can boast that I have slept between the two greatest men in England."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Boiled Red Snapper.—Clean, wash, wipe dry and dip in coarse white mosquito netting. Put it into boiling water deep enough to cover the fish, and be sure that the water has been salted and flavored with lemon juice. Let the water come to the boiling point then reduce the heat so that it will cook slowly. Simmer about half an hour. Lift carefully from the water, drain and unwrap; put it into a hot dish. Garnish with parsley and serve with tomato sauce or with Hollandaise sauce.

Poily's Pudding.—Make a custard of two cupsful of hot milk poured gradually upon the yolks of three eggs beaten with four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Butter a pudding dish and sprinkle the bottom with finely-minced candied lemon peel, minced crystallized fruit, and a very little shredded suet, then a layer of the crumbs. Pour the custard over a few spoonfuls of the warm custard as you go on until the dish is full. Cover and bake half an hour; spread with a meringue made of the whites of the eggs and a tablespoonful of sugar and color lightly. Eat cold.

Stuffed Potatoes.—Bake eight large potatoes until done. Cut off the tops with a sharp knife and scoop out the inside with a small spoon. Set aside the skins for future use. With the back of a spoon wash the potatoes smooth, rub into them two tablespoonfuls of butter, a gill of cream, two teaspoonfuls of finely minced onion, a teaspoonful of minced parsley and salt and cayenne pepper to taste. When you have worked these ingredients to a smooth paste, beat in the thickened whites of two eggs. Fill the empty potato skins with this creamy mixture, heating it high. Stand the potato cases on end, side by side, in a baking-dish and set in the oven until the potato protruding from the top is a delicate brown.

Creamed Eggs.—Take two tablespoonfuls of butter two tablespoonfuls (scant) of flour, one pint of milk, four eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper, half a small onion, six slices of toast. Boil the eggs twenty minutes and lay them in cold water; when cold remove the shells and cut each egg into six pieces. Cut the onion fine. Place the butter in a small frying pan and when it is hot slowly cook the onion in it until of a light yellow hue, taking care, however, not to brown either the butter or the onion at all. Remove the onion and the flour and stir until the paste is smooth and frothy, but do not let it brown in the least. Draw the pan back, gradually add the milk, return to the heat and when the sauce boils put in the salt, pepper

Heart and Home Problems

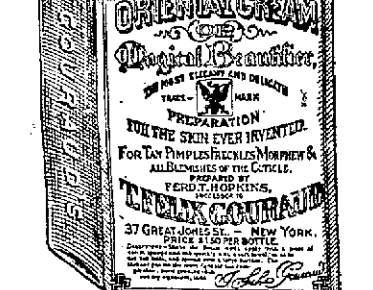

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman of twenty-five. I am married seven years. My husband is fifteen years older than I am. He doesn't want me to go anywhere of amusement. He never asks me to go with him, but he goes himself. He does not trust me with any of his business. If he gives me any money, I must tell to the penny what I do with it. He is always accusing me of wrongdoing. I am a very lonesome and long for someone of my own age, if I was to have a dear wife, for what should I be discouraged?

If I were you I would make as many friends as I could—women friends, of course. Go to church, get busy with church work and try to forget your husband's selfishness. As long as your husband lives and supports you and does not actually abuse you or go around with other women, you should do your duty as a good wife. You have no right to think of caring for another man. But that out of your mind. Any man who makes love to you while your husband lives has no honorable intentions toward you. There are a lot of men who make love to married women because they think a married woman is safe. Be cheerful, dress neatly and look as pretty

ITCHED AND BURNED TERRIBLY

Face All Covered With Eruption. Unable to Get Rest. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

382 No. Union St., Aurora, Ill.—"My ailment started with a little pimple and it always itched and burned terribly. I scratched it and in a few days my face was all covered with sores. It ran up to my eyes and the day after I could not see out of my right eye. I was unable to get any rest. I couldn't go to bed, being afraid of getting the itching all soiled, although I had my face all bandaged. "I was given two jars of salve but it kept getting worse. It was something like a running sore because every time I used some of the salve I had to wrap bandages around my neck to keep the water and pus from running down my body. After I had the trouble two months my mother told me I should try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I wrote for a sample and in a few days I received these and washed my face with the Cuticura Soap and put on some Cuticura Ointment and the next morning my face felt cool and somewhat relieved. After using the sample I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I followed this treatment just twenty-six days and after using one case of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was cured." (Signed) George Miller, Jan. 1, 1913. Cuticura Soap (25c) and Cuticura Ointment (50c) are sold everywhere. A single set is often sufficient when all else fails. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 22-p. Skin Book. Best Exercise. The best kind of exercise is the kind that makes you forget you are exercising—in other words, play, says a physician. It's a good scheme to have some more or less strenuous game for a hobby—gold or bowling or tennis or archery—anything that appeals to you and affords exercise with interest. But this is not saying that systematic exercise is not a good thing, too.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.)

I had the pleasure of attending the first annual ball of the Showmen's League of America, given in the Louis XVI room in the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Wednesday evening, March 4. I had anticipated a grand evening and must go on record as saying that the affair exceeded anything I had ever dreamed of. My friends, Colonel W. F. Cody, president of the league, "the grand old scout of them all," put himself out to make it pleasant for me. Years and years ago I was an active member in the tent show field and as Colonel Cody grasped my hand Wednesday night he said, "Dave, we all love you," in fancy I wandered back to the old days when I handled the finances for the Adam Forepaugh shows. I only wish that space permitted me to tell the readers of the Gazette all about what happened in Chicago at the Showmen's League of America ball.

The ball was held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Wednesday evening, March 4. It was a gala event, bristling from every branch of the profession of entertainment were present to participate in what has been considered by folks who are accustomed to attending unique entertainments as the most enjoyable affair which has been arranged in Chicago.

Japanese lanterns, etc., embellished the West room, which was transformed into a replica of Maxine, Paris. Harlequins and jesters, corymbes and ballet dancers, comedians and phantoms and all sorts of entertainers, helped to make the ball an event which will go down in history as the most successful as well as the most enjoyable ever arranged. It is not an uncommon thing for the Hotel Sherman to give banquets and balls and all sorts of activities, in fact there is a function on there every night of the year, but the way Frank Behring, the general manager, and his corps of assistants handled the Showmen's League of America ball deserves the highest commendation.

Dinners were served in the Gray room, immediately adjoining the Louis XVI room, where the ball was given, and a buffet dinner was given to the hundred entertainers in the Rose room. Colonel Cody, president of the league, just before his departure said, "Dave, I've been mixed up in a whole lot of affairs in my time—I've been all over the world—I've lunched with kings, dined in almost every country, but I must say that the ball tonight is one of the neatest and most complete functions ever arranged. There has not been a hitch from start to finish, and a thing doing all the time and all of a high class nature. The Showmen's League of America, of which I am the president, has certainly established a reputation not only as a but, but work for indigent showmen but it has evidenced to the world at large that the tent show people are regular folks."

Was along early in my career in the show business that we showed up the city of Boston for two weeks. After the close of the engagement there we made a kind of a circle of Boston, showing in all the suburban towns, some of which were quite out in the country, and there was one hotel at which we put up about twenty people. That made a lasting impression on my mind. It was a small wooden structure and if I remember rightly, was in Salem, Mass. The name of the place was John Brandt. This hotel, which probably had been built for some fifty years at that time (and that was thirty-six years ago), was, I should say, about thirty feet wide and perhaps one hundred feet long. It was two stories with low ceilings, and on the first floor was located a small bar room, the office, dining room and kitchen. There was one narrow stairway that led to the second floor and there was a long hall running the entire length of the building, with rooms on either side. This hall was something like four or five feet wide and in about the center of the hall there was a stove which served to make the steam heat for something like twenty-five sleeping rooms. But the thing that attracted my attention was the sign over the door. It read like this: "John Brandt, Licensed Victualler, meaning that he was licensed to serve meals. This was my first trip through the eastern country and this was the first sign of the kind I ever saw over an entrance to a hotel. They had been out of my mind for some years, but last Wednesday night when I stepped into the Hotel Sherman in Chicago, with its beautiful ball room, the great Rose banquet hall and the Louis XVI room, and watched the sea of people moving in all directions, the contrast between this and John Brandt's hotel of Salem, which was erected some eighty years ago, and the change that time had made was certainly a great one; but I think without any question at the time John Brandt built his hotel in Salem the Indians were camping on the ground where the Hotel Sherman is today. But it is not the hotel business alone which has advanced so rapidly for the difference in the shows that were traveling in the country in those days and those of today is equally great.

People attended the ball from practically every state in the union, but to me the larger part of them were new in the business. Many were kept away from the banquet and ball for the reason that the majority of the tented show people are busy arranging for an early start on the road in the spring.

While the dancing in the main hall began at 9:30 it was 11:30 before the grand march, led by Colonel Cody of the army and Mrs. Edna Earle of Baltimore, began, and when they led off in the grand march the cheers that went up were deafening and lasted for some minutes. Benson's orchestra of twelve pieces furnished the music, which was of the highest quality. Telegrams of congratulation were received during the course of the evening from President Woodrow Wilson, Colonel Charles W. Parker, America's amusement king and general director of the General Amusement company, treasurer of the league; William Judkins Hewitt, special representative of the New York Clipper, and others.

One of the features of the evening was the singing of ragtime by Sophia Tucker, who is known the world over as the Melba of ragtime. Another feature was the announcements made by George M. Hodge, who is considered the greatest auctioneer in the country, and has been famous in Chicago for many years at the World's fair and the White City and many other large entertainments. A quartette of male singers from the Majestic was also very fine and certainly deserves special mention.

An oil painting of Colonel Cody, made by one of the artists of the United States Tent and Awning company, adorned the Louis XVI room. The Cody Indian war pictures have been officially endorsed by the United States government. A special exhibition of them was given by Buffalo Bill for the president and his cabinet, senators and congressmen, in Washington last week. The verdict was, "They are so real as to be almost uncanny."

Colonel Cody left Chicago Thursday evening for Denver, where the pictures will be put on exhibition at the Taber Grand opera house for the first time. Colonel Cody himself will lecture on each and every picture.

In spite of his advanced years, Colonel Cody enjoys splendid health and is as straight as an arrow. Altogether, the embodiment of American manhood—eyes bright, vigorous of body, alert of mind—Buffalo Bill is a striking figure.

As George Cohan says, "Life is a funny proposition after all." Show folk have a mission to perform in this world, and the members of the S. L. A. are doing their part.

MRS. WINN'S ADVICE TO WOMEN

Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be Restored to Health.

Kansas City, Mo.—"The doctors told me I would never be a mother. Every month the pains were so bad that I could not bear my weight on one foot. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had not finished the first bottle when I felt greatly relieved and I took it until it made me sound and well, and I now have two fine baby girls. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly for what it has done for me. I always speak a word in favor of your medicine to other women who suffer when I have an opportunity."—Mrs. H. T. WINN, 1225 Fremont Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Read What Another Woman says: Cumming, Ga.—"I tell some suffering women every day of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it has done for me. I could not eat or sleep, had a bad stomach and was in misery all the time. I could not do my housework or walk any distance without suffering great pain. I tried doctors' medicines and different patent medicines but failed to get relief. My husband brought home your Vegetable Compound and in two weeks I could eat anything, could sleep like a healthy baby, and walk a long distance without feeling tired. I can highly recommend your Vegetable Compound to women who suffer as I did, and you are at liberty to use this letter."—Mrs. CHARLES BAGLEY, R. 3, Cumming, Ga.

He stared at the door through which she disappeared, his hopes, his conceits, his self-regard trailing after her with shameless disloyalty to the standards he had set for them, and then, with a rather ghastly smile of self-commiseration on his lips, he slipped out of the house, jumped into the motor car, and gave a brief but explicit command to the chauffeur, who lost no time in assisting his master.

Leslie Sat Bolt Upright and Glared at Him.

ter to turn tail in ignominious flight. Hetty was gloomily but resolutely employed in laying out certain of her personal belongings, preparatory to packing them for departure, when Sara entered her room.

They regarded each other steadily, questioning for a short space of time.

"Leslie has just called up to ask 'what the devil' I meant by letting him make a fool of himself," said Sara, with a peculiar little twisted smile on her lips.

Hetty offered no comment, but after a moment gravely and rather wistfully called attention to her present occupation by a significant flaunt of her hand and a saddened smile.

"I see," said Sara, without emotion. "If you choose to go, Hetty, I shall not oppose you."

"My position here is a false one, Sara. I prefer to go."

"This morning I should have held a sword over your head."

"It is very difficult for me to realize all that has happened."

"You are free to depart. You are free in every sense of the word. Your future rests with yourself, my dear."

"It hurts me more than I can tell to feel that you have been hating me all these months."

"It hurts me—now?"

Hetty walked to the window and looked out.

"What are your plans?" Sara inquired, after an interval.

"I shall seek employment—and wait for you to act."

"I? You mean?"

"I shall not run away, Sara. Nor do I intend to reveal myself to the authorities. I am not morally guilty of crime. A year ago I feared the consequences of my deed, but I have learned much since then. I was a stranger in a new world. In England we have been led to believe that you lynch women here as readily as you lynch men. I now know better than that. From you alone I learned my greatest lesson. You revealed to me the true meaning of human kindness. You shielded me who should not. Even now I believe that your first impulse was a tender one. I shall not forget it, Sara. You will live to regret the baser thought that came later on. I have loved you—yes, almost as a good dog loves his master."

It is not for me to tell the story of that night and all these months to the world. I would not be betraying myself, but you. You would be called upon to explain, not I. And you would be the one to suffer. When you met me on the road that night I was on my way back to the inn to give my self into custody. You have made it impossible for me to do so now. My lips are sealed. It rests with you, Sara.

Sara joined her in the broad window. There was a strangely excited look in her face. A gilded birdcage hung suspended in the casement. Without a word, she threw open the window screen. The gay little canary in the gilded cage cocked his head and watched her with alert eyes. Then she reached up and gently removed the cage from its fastenings. Putting it down upon the window sill, she opened the tiny door. The bird hopped about his prison in a state of great excitement.

Hetty looked on, fascinated.

At last a yellow streak shot out through the open door and an instant later resolved itself into the bobbing, fluttering dicky-bird that had lived in a cage all its life without an hour of freedom. For a few seconds it circled over the tree tops and then alighted on one of the branches. One might well have imagined that he could hear its tiny heart beating with terror. Its wings were half-raised and fluttering, its head jerking from side to side in wild perturbation. Taking courage, Master Dicky hopped timorously to a nearby twig, and then ventured a flight to a tree top nearer the window casement. Perched in its topmost branches he cheeped shrilly, as if there was fear in his little breast.

In silence the two women in the window watched the agitated movements of the bird. The same thought was in the mind of each, the same question, the same intense wish.

A brown thrush sped through the air, close by the timid canary. Like a flash it dropped to the twig lower down, its wings palpitating in violent alarm.

"Dicky!" called Sara Wendall, and then cheeped between her teeth.

A moment later Dicky was fluttering about the eaves; his circles grew smaller, his winging less rhythmic, till at last with a nervous little flutter he perched on the top of the window shutter, so near that they might have reached to him with their hands. He sat there with his head cocked to one side.

"Dicky!" called Sara again. This time she held out her finger. For some time he regarded it with indifference, not to say disfavor. Then he took one more flight, but much shorter than the first, bringing up again at the shutter-top. A second later he hopped down and his little talons gripped Sara's finger with an earnestness that left no room for doubt.

She lowered her hand until it was even with the open door of the gilded cage. He shot inside with a whirr that suggested a scramble. With his wings folded, he sat on his little trapeze and cheeped. She closed and fastened the door, and then turned to Hetty.

"My symbol," she said softly. There were tears in Hetty's eyes.

Leslie did not turn up at his father's place in the High street that night until Booth was safely out of the way. He spent a dismal evening at the boat club.

His father and mother were in the library when he came home at half-past ten. From a dark corner of the garden he had witnessed Booth's early departure. Vivian had gone down to the gate in the low-lying hedge with her visitor. She came in a moment after Leslie's entrance.

"Hello, Les," she said, bending an inquiring eye upon him. "Isn't this early for you?"

Her brother was standing near the fireplace.

"There's a heavy dew falling, Mother," he said gruffly. "Shan't I touch a match to the kindling?"

His mother came over to him quickly, and laid her hand on his arm.

"Your coat is damp," she said anxiously. "Yes, light the fire."

"It's very warm in this room," said Mr. Wendall, looking up from his book. They were always doing something for Leslie's comfort.

No one seemed to notice him. Leslie knelt and struck a match.

"Well!" said Vivian.

"Well-what?" he demanded without looking up.

"His sister took a moment for thought. 'Is Hetty coming to stay with us in July?'"

He stood erect, first rubbing his knee to dislodge the dust—then his palms.

"No, she isn't coming," he said. He drew a very long breath—the first in several hours—and then expelled it vocally. "She has refused to marry me."

Mr. Wendall turned a leaf in his book; it sounded like the crack of doom, so still had the room become.

Vivian had the forethought to push a chair toward her mother. It was a most timely act on her part, for Mrs. Wendall sat down very abruptly and very limply.

"She—what?" gasped Leslie's mother.

"Turned me down—cold," said Leslie briefly.

Mr. Wendall laid his book on the table without thinking to put the book-mark in place. Then he arose and removed his glasses, fumbling for the case.

"She—she—what?" he demanded.

"Sacked me," replied his son.

"Please do not jest with me, Leslie," said his mother, trying to smile.

"He isn't joking, mother," said Vivian, with a shrug of her fine shoulders.

"He—he must be," cried Mrs. Wendall impatiently. "What did she really say, Leslie?"

"The only thing I remember was 'goodby,'" said he, and then blew his nose violently.

"Poor old Les!" said Vivian, with real feeling.

"It was Sara Gooch's doing!" exclaimed Mrs. Wendall, getting her breath at last.

"Nonsense," said Mr. Wendall, picking up his book once more and turning to the place where the book-mark lay, after which he proceeded to re-read four or five pages before discovering his error.

No one spoke for a matter of five minutes or more. Then Mrs. Wendall got up, went over to the library table and closed with a snap the bulky blue book with the limp leather cover, saying as she held it up to let him see that it was the privately printed history of the Murgatroyd family.

"It came by post this evening from London. She is merely a fourth cousin, my son."

He looked up with a gleam of interest in his eye.

CHAPTER XIV.

Crossing the Channel.

Booth, restless with a vague uneasiness that had come over him during the night, keeping him awake until nearly dawn, was hard put during the early hours of the forenoon to find occupation for his interest until a reasonable time arrived for appearing at Southlook. He was unable to account for this feeling of uncertainty and irritation.

At nine he set out to walk over to Southlook, realizing that he should have to spend an hour in profitless gossip with the lodge keeper before presenting himself at the villa, but somehow relishing the thought that even so he would be nearer to Hetty than if he remained in his own doorway.

Half-way there he was overtaken by Sara's big French machine returning from the village. The car came to a standstill as he stepped aside to let it pass, and Sara herself leaned over and cordially invited him to get in and ride home with her.

"What an early bird you are," he exclaimed as he took his seat beside her.

She was not in a mood for airy pastillage, as he soon discovered.

"Miss Castleton has gone up to town, Mr. Booth," she said rather lifelessly. "I have just taken her to the station. She caught the eight-thirty."

He was at once solicitous. "No bad news, I hope?" There was no thought in his mind that her absence was other than temporary.

"She is not coming back, Brandon."

She had not addressed him as Brandon before.

He stared. "You—you mean—" The words died on his lips.

"She is not coming back," she repeated.

An accusing gleam leaped into his eyes.

"What has happened, Mrs. Wendall?" he asked.

She was quick to perceive the change in his voice and manner.

"She prefers to live apart from me. That is all."

"When was this decision reached?"

"But yesterday. Soon after she came in from her walk with you."

"Do—do you mean to imply that that had anything to do with her leaving your home?" he demanded, with a flush on his cheek.

She met his look without finching. "It was the beginning."

"You—you criticized her? You took her to task—"

"I notified her that she was to marry Leslie Wendall if she marries anyone at all," she said in a perfectly level tone.

"Good Lord, Mrs. Wendall!"

"But she is not going to marry Leslie."

"I know it—I knew it yesterday," he cried triumphantly. "She loves me, Sara. Didn't she say as much to you?"

"Yes, Brandon, she loves you. But she will not be your wife."

"What is all this mystery? Why can't she be my wife? What is there to prevent?"

She regarded him with dark, inscrutable eyes. Many seconds passed before she spoke.

"Would you want her for your wife if you knew she had belonged to another man?"

He turned very cold. The palms of his hands were wet, as with ice-water. Something dark seemed to flit before his eyes.

"I will not believe that of her," he said, shaking his head with an air of finality.

"That is not an answer to my question."

"Yes, I would still want her," he declared steadily.

"I merely meant to put you to the harshest test," she said, and there was relief in her voice. "She is a good girl, she is pure. I asked my question because until yesterday I had reason to doubt her."

"Good heavens, how could you doubt those honest, guileless eyes of—"

She shook her head sadly. "To answer you I would have to reveal the secret that makes it impossible for her to become your wife, and that I cannot, will not do."

"Is it fair to me?"

Really Hard Luck.

"Did you see anything?" whispered the burglar on guard as his pal emerged from the window. "Now, do bloke wot lives here is a lawyer," replied the other in disgust. "Dat's hard luck," said the first; "did you lose anything?"—Ohio State Journal.

Costs Little, but there is Nothing Better at any Price. Fully Guaranteed.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough almost instantly, and will usually conquer an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This recipe makes a pint—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents a bottle) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

Often probably know the medical value of pine in treating bronchial asthma, bronchitis, spasmodic croup and whooping cough. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualacal and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Dinner Stories

The manager of a vaudeville house was testing the abilities of a few candidates for stage honors one day

"I know it—I knew it yesterday," he cried triumphantly. "She loves me, Sara. Didn't she say as much to you?"

"Yes, Brandon, she loves you. But she will not be your wife."

"What is all this mystery? Why can't she be my wife? What is there to prevent?"

She regarded him with dark, inscrutable eyes. Many seconds passed before she spoke.

"Would you want her for your wife if you knew she had belonged to another man?"

He turned very cold. The palms of his hands were wet, as with ice-water. Something dark seemed to flit before his eyes.

"I will not believe that of her," he said, shaking his head with an air of finality.

"That is not an answer to my question."

"Yes, I would still want her," he declared steadily.

"I merely meant to put you to the harshest test," she said, and there was relief in her voice. "She is a good girl, she is pure. I asked my question because until yesterday I had reason to doubt her."

"Good heavens, how could you doubt those honest, guileless eyes of—"

She shook her head sadly. "To answer you I would have to reveal the secret that makes it impossible for her to become your wife, and that I cannot, will not do."

"Is it fair to me?"

Really Hard Luck.

"Did you see anything?" whispered the burglar on guard as his pal emerged from the window. "Now, do bloke wot lives here is a lawyer," replied the other in disgust. "Dat's hard luck," said the first; "did you lose anything?"—Ohio State Journal.
